

Château du Chatelard

Purchased by the Rosier family in 2000, this estate has been part of history since Charlemagne grew vines. Moreover, Château du Chatelard was the centre of a memorable siege during the French Revolution and was rebuilt in 18th century. Located less than 2 miles SE of Moulin-à-Vent and Fleurie, the château is situated in Lancié, right the heart of Cru Beaujolais country (see map).

Oenologist M.Jacques Dupont, columnist for le Point magazine, said regarding the 'Nouveau' wines of Château du Chatelard: "The richness of this wine is its charming character, harmony and complexity... blackberries and cherries, fruity; a classic." This perfectly describes the anticipated characteristic qualities of the 'Nouveau' wines which this year, 2006, will surpass those of previous years. The very cold winter followed by the extremely hot summer will combine to produce generously flavored Beaujolais Villages Nouveau.
